

The Great Central Hotel

London. June 13th 1906

To Mrs Parlow.

Dear Madam,

It gives me much pleasure to testify to your daughter Kathleen's very great talent for the violin, and to say that I consider that she is endowed with artistic gifts of the very highest order.

Having now given her six lessons and tried her ability at all points, I am fully convinced that with further study, for the fuller developement of her musical and physical powers, she may confidently expect to take a foremost place in the world, amongst the women violinists of her generation.

If it could possibly be arranged for Miss Parlow to come to St Petersburg to study, I would do everything in my power to furnish her with all that is necessary for success & recognition.

Yours truly,

Leopold Auer

Professor of the Imperial Conservatoire St Petersburg

The Great Central Hotel

London. June 18th 1906

To Mrs Barlow.

Dear Madam,

It gives me much pleasure to testify to your daughter Kathleen's very great talent for the violin, and to say that I consider that she is endowed with artistic gifts of the very highest order.

Having now given her six lessons and tried her ability at all points, I am fully convinced that with further study, for the fuller development of her musical and physical powers, she may confidently expect to take a foremost place in the world, amongst the women violinists of her generation.

-tion.

It is possible to be arranged for Miss Barlow to come to St Petersburg to study, I would do everything in my power to furnish her with all that is necessary for success & recogni-tion.

Yours truly,

Leonid And